Alan:

I think being on a plane qualifies as being "truly" unavailable.

What is going on with the emails that you still have failed to send over notwithstanding my request of yesterday? Please ensure that you send over the emails in response to our outstanding request by no later than the close of business today – I trust I need not remind you that you repeatedly advised me that such emails do not exist until I provided you proof of same.

We will not consent to any more delays.

You can appear on Monday in Mr. Masri's stead if he is truly unavailable.

Gentlemen:

Will you consent to an adjournment of Monday's telephone conference because Michael Masri will be traveling and unavailable during that time? We must make a letter motion to Magistrate Parker. Please advise as soon as possible with your consent or reasons for withholding consent.

Regards,
